

Heather Keachie

Heather is a partner with Gardiner Roberts LLP practicing primarily in the area of not-for-profit and charity law. She provides corporate and commercial services to her clients, and acts as general corporate counsel to charities and not-for-profits operating in Canada and internationally. Heather works pragmatically with her clients through various stages of their corporate lifecycle, and she regularly advises on questions of governance, by-laws, charitable registration and regulatory compliance, and real estate matters. Heather has been volunteering for more than 15 years within the charitable and not-for-profit community in Canada, and currently sits on several volunteer boards. She has also taught as an adjunct professor at the University of Western, Faculty of Law, on not-for-profit and charity law. Heather was born and raised in Scarborough and is a husband and father of two young children who loves coaching their sports teams, and spending quality family time exploring every corner of Toronto.
